ATD's Public Workshop Learning Credit Program

The ATD Learning Credit Program allows your organization to spend learning credits throughout the year on any of ATD's more than 70 public workshop programs.

Here's how it works:

- Purchase a minimum of $10,000 in learning credits that can be used to register any employee in any public ATD workshop for one year.
- Receive discounts on every workshop purchased with learning credits allowing your budget to go further.
- Receive the training history of your employees.
- Provides flexibility to meet the changing training needs of your organization throughout the year.
- It will reduce administration costs by eliminating the need for multiple purchases during the year.

ATD's Enterprise Solutions account management team can assist you by providing recommendations and guidance on how best to allocate learning credits. They will also notify you of the latest training programs available based on your talent development needs.

Take advantage of this easy and cost effective way to provide professional development for your team. Contact us for more information at 844.912.2267.

Learning Credits: Learning credits may only be used to acquire public workshop education programs offered by ATD. Learning credits are valid for workshop registration over a period of 12 months from the date your order is accepted by ATD and courses must be completed within 15 months of effective purchase date. Learning credits may only be used to acquire products and services at the list price in effect at the time the relevant product or service is purchased. The list price will be reduced by applying the learning credits discount specified at the time of the learning credits purchase. If the individual registering for a program is a current member, then the learning credit discount will be applied to the member rate. Learning credits cannot be used as a payment method for additional learning credits, or for the ATD Essential Series Annual Pass. Separate learning credit accounts cannot be used to acquire a single product or service. One participant substitution is allowed per registration. Learning credits are non-transferable and non-assignable. If balance falls below $395 remaining funds may be applied for purchase of memberships, publications, or books. Terms and conditions are subject to change.
